Parkinson's

Neurologic

CANONICAL SOURCE - VERBATIM

Most commonly caused by an incoordination in the nervous system initiated at the glandular level in the patches of the emunctory circulation that controls coordination between sympathetic and cerebrospinal nerve systems. Additionally, it may be brought on by mercury poisoning, medication, or infection.

The object is to reestablish the coordination between the nervous systems and stimulate the glands with the process of regeneration, using both massage which directly and reflexively benefits both the circulatory and nervous system, and the use of a vibrational device provided in consult.
