Reestablishing Equilibrium

1. Electrotherapy
2. Manipulations
3. Patience
4. Suggestion
5. Activities

1 Electrotherapy -Using device 1 (given in consultation) to equalize the extremities' circulation as related to nerve impulses.
-Using device 2 (given in consultation) to assist nerves to feel out their roots through the system for the activity of impulse and to work with and coordinate with another.

2. Manipulations (for structural correction and autonomic coordination)-Adjustments made with autonomic ('sympathetic') coordination; there are centers from which both the cerebrospinal and sympathetic nerve system form conjunctions (is specific adjustments are made without the coordination of these areas where those specific conjunctions are made, these may contract rather than relax the body)- a regulatory form of osteopathic manual therapy paired with a subtle electrotherapy treatment that attunes the vibration of the body to gold and silver - adding to or taking from impulses within the system, from which those senses react in the brain itself - and producing coordination with drainage in the system.

3. Patience Develop and maintain patience - the most beautiful of the virtues. Ensure there is a real desire to regain good health, and that there is a willingness to be persistent, consistent, and patient. Patience as an active positive awareness of self and the continuity of life. Practice of it begets hope and faith. It stabilizes the cure and makes for growth, and is especially therapeutically pragmatic in conditions requiring nervous system regeneration, which require a substantial investment of time and resources, as well as a constructive mental attitude.

4. Suggestion Inform the self that it is recovering and getting healthier and healthier using a naturalistic subjugative suggestion and through formal hypnosis

5. Activities There must be a change of heart, of mind, of purpose, of intent; an application of spiritual truth for the benefit of those in contact, with daily practice. This fundamental change and mechanical appliances will bring about recovery.
